From the Philadelphia Gazette. WASHINGTON. When the great war of the rebellion broke out, the people of the North were divided into two parties. One party was in favor of the Union, and the other party was in favor of the South. The Union party was the majority, and they were the ones who won the war.

THE FIGHT OF HELL-KETTLE. John, the boy, was a very brave and strong boy. He was the son of a poor man, and he had to work hard to support his family. One day, he was out on a errand, and he saw a group of men fighting. He went over to see what was going on, and he saw that the men were fighting over a piece of land. John was very angry, and he decided to help the weaker party.

THE MINISTERS. The ministers of the church were very busy. They had to go to many places to preach the word of God. They were very kind and helpful to the people. One day, they were in a small town, and they saw a man who was very poor. The man was asking for help, and the ministers gave him what he needed.

I am afflicted during the whole of last year with influenza, rheumatism, and headache, and during the greater part of the month and a half, previous to my recovery, and spent much of my time in a bed-chamber, and had for weeks a feeling of helplessness, and of being irresponsible. As a last resort, I was induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I purchased a box, and started a trial of Brewster's Drug Store application, by the breaking of my case, and after using one bottle, I experienced relief, and have been entirely cured, which has now been about seven weeks, and I am now able to attend to my usual affairs. I am informed by other patients that I should be able to do so.
